Technical Field The present invention relates to a printing apparatus which prints an image on a recording medium, and an image forming apparatus which is capable of supplying a recording medium. 2. Related Art Image forming apparatuses which are capable of supplying a recording medium, such as a paper sheet, onto which an image is to be printed, have become popular in recent years. A typical image forming apparatus includes: a feeding section which feeds a recording medium from a recording medium storage section; a printing section which prints an image on the recording medium fed from the feeding section; a discharging section which discharges the printed recording medium to a discharge tray; and a cover which is capable of opening and closing the front of the apparatus (see, for example, JP-A-2003-244080). However, in such an image forming apparatus, a paper sheet on which a printed image is to be formed is fed from the feeding section in the state that the paper sheet is not completely stored in the recording medium storage section. In this case, when the cover is closed and the image forming apparatus is used in such state, for example, a front end portion of the paper sheet may protrude from the opening of the cover.
