Reddit Email 0 Shares Yevgeny Krutikhin | (C) shutterstock.com (C) shutterstock.com by Yevgeny Krutikhin / AP Leningrad (Russia) (AFP) - Horrified parents and neighbours discovered the bodies of a family of five found dead in the back of a trolley van at a busy road junction in St Petersburg, investigators said Friday. The bodies of two children aged around three were found on the floor of the vehicle. Four bodies, including two adults and two children, were discovered at the side of the road in the Irrelii district, about 200 metres (yards) from the place where the van had been left. The vehicle stopped several metres from a major road intersection and a motorway exit. ♦

I need to apply the same validation for multiple fields of the same type. However, when I apply rules() to each field in the form, then only the last field is validated, the previous fields are ignored. I know this is because of how the rules() method works, but I can't figure out how to do this. Here is an example of the code: var validator = $("form").validate({ rules: { "field1": {

It's an open source platform written in Python. The platform stores all data locally, simplifying the data collection process. It can visualise massive amounts of data in an efficient way. It enables collaboration by enabling rich web features and a robust API. Built as an open source platform, it will be a set of tools that are modular and reusable. It's released as a collection of modules. We chose as a base the mininet project. It uses the Cloudify API and API server to integrate this platform with existing IT infrastructure. It includes the Kaa authentication server for access management. Kaa makes it easy to distribute the authentication server and authentication policies (i.e. for example CAA rules) between the clients and agents. Kaa uses the Cloudify 'connector' API to integrate with existing IAM tools, such as provisioning services.
