the property to Carey. Sometime thereafter he had a conversation with Mr. Minos in which he made a statement that he had secured a mortgage on the property. The statement was made in the presence of Mr. Minos and Mr. King who were in the room at the time. Mr. King was called as a witness in this trial and testified that he and Mr. Minos were present at the time and that it was about the same time that Minos told him that he had purchased the bond from the defendant. We think this testimony, together with the other testimony in the case, is sufficient to show that the defendant had notice of the interest Carey had acquired in the property. He voluntarily became a party to a contract with appellant for the sale of the bond and the company was entitled to sue him as any one who entered into a contract, knowing that he did not have the money to pay the purchase money. (National Bank of Commerce v. Hard, 193 Tenn. 417, 246 S.W.2d 10; Crompton v. Mutual Trust & Safe Deposit Co., 176 Tenn. 641, 150 S.W.2d 60, 48 A.L.R.2d 1331; and an annotation of cases in 48 A.L.R.2d at page 1345.) If the defendant had paid the principal of the bond and contracted to insure it, his position might have been different. (Citations) But when he contracted with Carey as was done here, he was charged with notice of the transaction as well as all the facts and circumstances involved. Bank of Helen v. Burch, 16
