Mercedes-Benz M-Class Hybrid Vehicle Hits The Road Aug 29, 2014 by Dave Coutts

After Mercedes-Benz's US announcement that its new M-Class "Matic Hybrid" will be available by the end of 2015, it has now been spotted on the road in South Africa. The vehicle, which is strictly for demonstration purposes, incorporates a fuel-cell electric powertrain that delivers a combined fuel-efficiency figure which exceeds 50 mpg. The system is said to deliver a rating of 148 MPGe, which means that on a purely fuel-economy basis, the M-Class hybrid is one of the most fuel efficient vehicles available today. The US engine lineup will feature 1.8-liter and 2.0-liter gas engines and a turbo 1.8-liter diesel. Technical details on the hybrid model will be announced in the near future, but Mercedes-Benz has said that the basis of its powertrain will be the same as the gasoline and diesel-powered M-Class. This would point to a mild hybrid system that makes use of a battery and motor and can be plugged directly into an existing gas or diesel engine to increase fuel efficiency. In testing, the M-Class hybrid accelerates from 0 to 100 km/h in less than 10 seconds, with a top speed of more than 200 km/h. This is impressive considering that the gasoline-powered M-Class already offers a similar kind of acceleration. ISRC ISRC may refer to: Government International Standard Recording Code, a standard used by Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) to identify the recording. International Standardized Rate Code, a standard used by the United States Postal 0cc13bf012
