example, for a
vibrating gyroscope
which is a type of inertial sensor, it is proposed to use a
vibrating element

which vibrates at a predetermined
resonance
frequency as a
sensing element,
and to detect
Coriolis forces
caused by an angular velocity
using the principle of detection of a

Coriolis force which is generated by the

Document 1). FIG. 4
is a diagram
showing the
configuration of a
vibrating gyroscope
according to a
conventional art, and the vibrating gyroscope includes a vibrating element 12, a driving element 16, and an oscillating circuit 20 which excites the vibrating element 12. The vibrating element 12 is fixed to the vibrating arm

13 of a frame 11 so as to vibrate in the X-axis direction as indicated by an arrow in the figure, and an excitation piezoelectric element 14 is arranged at the middle portion of the vibrating arm 13

in order to transmit vibration to the
vibrating element
12. When an AC
voltage is applied to the excitation piez
