Facebook account hacking has become a popular activity. Hackers can hack Facebook accounts for many purposes, including accessing private information such as messages or private photos. Many people and businesses have been hacked, with ransom notes asking for a large payment in order to avoid having their photos and information posted online. Hackers use many different methods to hack accounts, some of which are listed here. What is Facebook account hacking? Facebook accounts are more like aliases which are different usernames attached to a single account. Hackers can hack Facebook accounts just by knowing the username of the Facebook account they are targeting. The hacker can then call this username into many websites to look for a valid Facebook account with that username. These websites then let the hacker know if the username is valid or not, based on the information contained in the Facebook account of the targeted user. When hackers get a valid username or Facebook account, they can change the password of the targeted account and be in full control of the account. The target user won't be able to access their account even if they type their correct password. What does a hacked Facebook account look like? The hacker can change the name, status, gender, location, birthday, real name, and phone number of the target user. They can also change their profile picture, cover photo, profile description and add multiple friends to the targeted account. They can also add fan pages to the account, and can even add private groups. They can also change the category of the account. The hacker can access to much more information about the targeted user than the username only. How do I hack a Facebook account? There are many online hackers that can hack Facebook accounts. They use various ways to hack Facebook accounts. Hackers use social engineering and brute-force methods to hack Facebook accounts. All these methods involve gaining information about the target user before they can hack their Facebook account.
