In the related art, an illumination apparatus including a light-emitting diode (LED) as a light source has been known. The illumination apparatus includes a plurality of light-emitting diodes (LEDs) as described above, and achieves various illumination effects by controlling the operation time of the individual light-emitting diodes and the number of light-emitting diodes that are turned on and off. However, there is a problem that the illumination apparatus described above cannot illuminate a wide area uniformly because light cannot be efficiently emitted in a wide area. Accordingly, illumination apparatuses including a plurality of units for changing the output of each light-emitting diode according to the position in which the illumination apparatus is installed have been proposed. In the case of the illumination apparatus described in Patent Literature 1, the output of each light-emitting diode is changed according to the distance from a light-emitting di
